

FUSIONEQ DEAL READINESS REPORT

Deal Readiness Report

DEAL MEMORY ID

SAMPLE-CLIENT-001

What the deal has evidenced, what remains unproven, and the next move most likely to create decision clarity.

EXECUTIVE READINESS READ

This deal shows credible engagement, but decision readiness remains developing because the available evidence does not yet prove final decision ownership, approval sequencing, or buyer-owned urgency.

The opportunity should not be treated as stalled, but forecast confidence should remain conditional until the team validates who owns the decision and what internal step converts interest into commitment.

RECOMMENDED NEXT MOVE

Before advancing the opportunity, confirm the final decision owner, approval path, decision criteria, and buyer-owned next action that proves meaningful movement.

Path to Decision Readiness

This path translates the readiness read into the next buyer-facing move: the evidence to create, the assumption to validate, and the people who need to be involved.

EVIDENCE TO CREATE

Proof of final decision ownership, approval sequence, evaluation weighting, and buyer-owned timing.

ASSUMPTION TO VALIDATE

Engagement from the current stakeholders will translate into internal decision movement.

WHO TO INVOLVE

Champion, decision owner, procurement or finance contact, and the stakeholder who can explain final approval mechanics.

FUSIONEQ READINESS PRINCIPLE

This report separates what was recorded from what has been evidenced. FusionEQ does not replace judgment. It sharpens it.

Created from a Diagnostic Deal Briefing Analysis, this report presents deal readiness intelligence in a polished customer-facing format.

1. Report Identity

Deal Memory ID	SAMPLE-CLIENT-001
Report Type	FusionEQ Deal Readiness Report
Report Date	May 20, 2026
Prepared For	Sample Client
Source	Diagnostic Deal Briefing Analysis generated from information provided by the deal team.
Privacy Note	Uses only details approved for inclusion in the customer-facing report.

2. Executive Readiness Read

VISIBLE SIGNAL

Multiple meetings, positive stakeholder engagement, and continued evaluation activity.

FUSIONEQ READ

Activity is real, but it has not yet become decision evidence.

BETTER MOVE

Confirm decision ownership, approval mechanics, and the buyer-owned action before expanding the evaluation further.

3. Information Provided / FusionEQ Interpretation

INFORMATION PROVIDED

The information provided included meeting activity, stakeholder notes, evaluation history, pricing discussion, next-step commentary, and the deal team's current belief about close likelihood.

No confirmed approval-path documentation, final decision owner confirmation, or procurement weighting details were included.

FUSIONEQ INTERPRETATION

- Readiness: 51 / Developing
- Pattern: Decision Ownership Gap
- Forecast Read: Conditional
- Primary Clarity Needed: Final accountable decision owner

4. Executive Readiness Summary

The opportunity remains viable and commercially relevant, with enough engagement to justify continued focus.

The current readiness state is not yet strong enough to support high confidence because decision ownership and approval mechanics remain unclear.

The next move should create evidence about how the buyer will actually decide, not simply produce another product or commercial discussion.

5. Deal Snapshot

Opportunity Type	Sample enterprise opportunity
Current Stage	Active evaluation
Current Next Step	Decision-structure clarification
Decision Owner	Not yet verified
Approval Path	Not yet evidenced
Buyer Owned Movement	Partially evidenced

Alignment

63

Partial

Control

38

Unverified

Momentum

52

Partial

Alignment is partial because stakeholders appear engaged, but the business consequence and approval group alignment are not fully proven.

Control is unverified because the team does not yet have confirmed decision ownership, procurement influence, or final approval sequencing.

Momentum is partial because the buyer continues to engage, but buyer-owned internal movement has not yet been clearly evidenced.

Path to Decision Readiness

This path translates the readiness read into the next buyer-facing move: the evidence to create, the assumption to validate, and the people who need to be involved.

EVIDENCE TO CREATE

Proof of final decision ownership, approval sequence, evaluation weighting, and buyer-owned timing.

ASSUMPTION TO VALIDATE

Engagement from the current stakeholders will translate into internal decision movement.

WHO TO INVOLVE

Champion, decision owner, procurement or finance contact, and the stakeholder who can explain final approval mechanics.

7. Decision Readiness Overview

The deal is active, but not yet decision-ready. FusionEQ reads the current state as a gap between visible evaluation activity and proven buying structure.

The team should protect time by validating decision mechanics before adding more product depth.

8. What Has Been Evidenced

- Sustained stakeholder engagement
- Relevant product or solution interest
- Continued evaluation activity
- A credible business problem

- Champion accessibility

9. What Remains Unproven

- Final accountable decision owner
- Approval sequence
- Procurement or finance influence
- Decision criteria
- Buyer-owned urgency
- Internal recommendation path

10. Key Readiness Signals

Recorded Activity

- Multiple meetings occurred
- Stakeholders responded positively
- The team discussed solution fit
- Follow-up questions continued

Decision Evidence

- Stakeholder interest is evidenced
- Problem relevance is partially evidenced
- Decision ownership is not evidenced
- Approval path is not evidenced

11. Identified Pattern

Decision Ownership Gap

This pattern matters because a deal can remain visibly active while the actual decision structure remains unowned or unclear.

12. Buyer-Owned Momentum Read

Buyer-owned momentum is only partially evidenced. The buyer is participating, but the buyer has not yet clearly advanced the internal decision path.

The team should look for buyer actions that move the decision forward, not only for continued engagement.

13. Decision Ownership Read

Decision ownership is the primary constraint. The current evidence does not yet prove who can approve, who can block, or how final selection will be made.

14. Alignment and Urgency Read

Alignment appears plausible, but not yet proven across the full buying group.

Urgency should be treated as unverified until the buyer ties timing to an internal business consequence.

15. Forecast Confidence Read

Conditional

The deal has meaningful engagement, but the forecast should remain conditional until decision authority, approval path, and buyer-owned next steps are evidenced.

16. Recommended Next Moves

The next move should create decision evidence, not simply extend activity.

STRATEGIC READ

The risk is not lack of engagement. The risk is mistaking engagement for decision control.

Before advancing the opportunity, lead a focused decision-readiness conversation with the champion and final-approval stakeholder. Use it to confirm decision ownership, approval sequence, criteria, blocker risk, and the buyer-owned action that proves meaningful movement.

- Final decision owner
- Approval sequence and remaining steps
- Decision criteria and weighting
- Blocker or delay risk
- Buyer-owned next action and timing

Forecast confidence should remain conditional until these items are evidenced.

17. Questions to Create Clarity

- Who ultimately owns the final decision?
- What approval steps remain before the organization can commit?
- Which decision criteria will determine the outcome?
- Who can block, delay, or reshape the decision?
- What buyer-owned action will happen next, and by when?
- What would need to be true for this opportunity to move from evaluation activity to decision readiness?

18. Deal Coach Guidance

Use FusionEQ Coach to prepare the team before the next buyer-facing conversation.

Recommended coaching focus:

- Stakeholder language that reduces defensiveness and increases clarity
- Question sequencing that surfaces decision structure without sounding interrogational
- Forecast calibration based on evidence rather than optimism
- Next-step negotiation that requires buyer-owned movement
- Internal deal-team alignment on what must be proven before confidence increases

Coaching objective: protect time, avoid false confidence, and create the evidence needed to determine whether the opportunity is truly advancing toward a decision.

FusionEQ Deal Readiness Report. Decision evidence. Readiness clarity. Better next moves.
